Our expert attorneys have years of experience specializing in family and juvenile cases. We will take the time needed to get to know your child as a human being. Just because your child may have broken the law does not mean he or she should be viewed as a delinquent. We can negotiate in court to achieve an outcome that will benefit all parties involved.

Juvenile Defense Attorneys in Texas

Boot camps. Sometimes a wayward child just needs is a good lesson. Texas is known for having successful boot camp programs for juvenile delinquents. These programs will keep the child out of jail and will teach them respect for authority and their elders.

Conditional dismissal. Juvenile court is quite a different experience than what an adult would encounter in many cases. The number one goal of most juvenile court judges is to provide adequate rehabilitation to get the juvenile back on the correct path in life. Our law firm can negotiate with the court and the prosecutor's office to formulate a plan to dismiss all charges from your child's record. If the child can stay out of trouble for a set amount of time, we can secure a dismissal.

Parent involvement. We believe that juveniles who commit crimes are often simply calling out for attention. Sometimes all a child needs is to spend a little more time with their family and a little less time on the street. Our law firm will work with the court to get your child set up with court appointed counseling if needed, and back on the straight and narrow. We urge all parents who are dealing with a juvenile involved in a difficult situation to take a step back and analyze what they can do to help their child.

The lawyers at White and Measells will be with you every step of the way. Contact us today at (512) 369-3737 for a free consultation.
